Releasing the Ego

by Nouk Sanchez and Tomas Vieira

If we pare existence right down to the essence of our Universe, we'll see that there are only two things that exist. Fear is one and love is the other. One is an illusion manufactured by the mind. That leaves only love, the infinite expression of the Source, to be the single reality that exists despite what our perception tells us.

Humanity's entire identity is derived from the ego or split mind. This is the part of us that believes it is separate from God and each other. This is our only adversary. Ego, our unconscious identity, is responsible for all seeming random chaos that we experience, from relationship conflicts to global devastation. It's the cause of all our desires and all our suffering. By projecting its unconscious guilt outward, it creates a world that seems to confirm its fears. The ego is fear. So, looking for liberation through most religions and wisdom teachings is like attempting to wake from a dream by making it real. It will never happen until we see the dream and release it.

Fear, conflict and loss are permanent attributes of the ego state. Most spiritual seekers are attempting the impossible which is 'awakening through an uninvestigated ego'. That's why the great spiritual teachings just don't produce enlightened people. There are millions of spiritual 'seekers' out there. However unless they identify and release the fundamental cause of all suffering [the ego], they'll never be 'finders.'

Through the unquestioned ego, we search for happiness, love and abundance. What we don't ask ourselves is, "WHO is doing all this searching?" and just "WHO is wanting to control the means to achieving happiness and peace?" The answer is ego of course. The ego leads us everywhere to find peace, love and abundance never disclosing that its catch cry is "seek but never find", because if you found what you were looking for, the ego would disappear. What we're all looking for is unshakeable, irreversible love and that can only be found through radical self-inquiry and Quantum forgiveness. These are the keys to awakening. You can meditate for 100 years, do yoga, give consistently and study spiritual teachings yet never get close to awakening. Unless our very identity and all that it's attached to is questioned, we'll never find unchanging happiness, peace or abundance.

Our true identity is love, that's who we are and if we're experiencing anything other than this, we're seriously mistaken. The ego projects a plethora of problems ranging from personal to global, yet in Reality 'it' alone stands as the one block to our awareness of the Infinite magnitude of loves presence.

When we begin to release the ego, we will see who we really are and the Purpose we were born to fulfil.

Nouk Sanchez and Tomas Vieira will be facilitating a 5 day 'Undoing the Ego' event at the Vale Healing Centre, Stoke Trister, Wincanton, Somerset, from June 19th to June 24th. For more information log on to www.valehealing.co.uk

Transitus: A Continuing Journey Through Love

Transitus is a holistic Network and Resource to support a change of approach to physical death, dying and continuity of consciousness - before, during and after life. The name 'Transitus' comes from the Latin verb transire - meaning here 'to make a passage or crossing, from the ending of one phase of life into the birthing of another. The Network comprises a growing group of people working in a way that honours all aspects of life - mind, body, spirit and emotions – that are involved with the sacred process of dying.

Our aims are: to release fears and taboos around death and dying; support those dying and bereaved; raise awareness of 'green' and family based approaches to death; and to encourage the acceptance of the concept of continuity of consciousness.

The Network also supports its members so that none of us feels alone. Members include those working with: palliative care nursing, midwifing the soul; music thanatology; alternative funerals and celebrations; natural burials; grief counselling; life after death; related workshops; and more.

The Transitus Resource List, regularly compiled and updated, is available by email and post to those involved and then by request to all seeking information and contacts. Our hope is to see this document in public places everywhere. To find out more about the Transitus Network or the Transitus Festival Day for Death and Dying, log on to www.martinsey.org.uk/transitus

Book Review: King Arthur. The Waste Land and the New Age. By Gordon Strong

It is now nearly forty years since Geoffrey Ashe re-kindled an interest in King Arthur with his writings and the Camelot Project. During the following decades much was written of Rex quondam, Rex futurus by a myriad of scholars. It is inevitable that speculation will play a major part in accounting for events that lack any significant contemporary records. When, as with the Arthuriad, a mythological quality has become irrevocably entwined into the tale, conjecture is inevitably paramount.

A history, a collection of myths, a literary heritage and a table of magical correspondences have been pulled together to aid the reader to create a landscape as evocative and inspiring as any Avalon. A personal vision is always the most relevant to the individual, as well as the most precious.

The symbolism of Arthur, Merlin and Morgan le Fay is relevant to The New Age. But for the kingdom of Logres how else could we experience the darkness that warriors know or see the wondrous light beyond the veil as do the Grail Maidens? In many ways this is the story of a Golden Age, one belonging to Britons and Celts, and set in Albion. Perhaps these times will return, and we can have no more fitting inspiration than a glorious king, noble knights and the enchantment of priestess and wizard. For further information about the book contact Gordon flashmagic7@yahoo.co.uk (ISBN-10: 095552301X).
