August 2010

The August newsletter contains a listing of events for the month ahead, three articles, book reviews and news of an exciting study, the West Kennet Long Barrow Ancestors Project.

The latest addition to the on-line Wessex lecture archive is Yoga as a Way of Life: Wholeness through Meditation and Exercise by Pauline Thelwell.

A New Sense of Community

By Catherine Guinevere

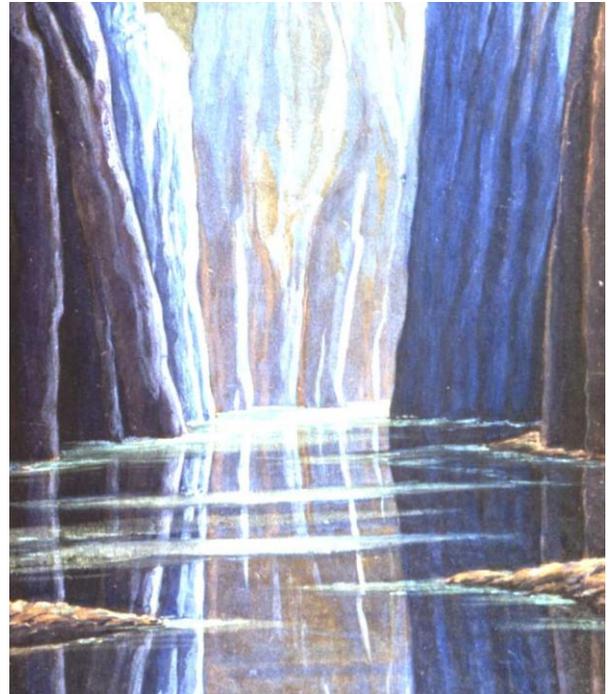

As we edge towards the Winter Solstice of 2012 and the birth of a New Golden Age, 2009 might be regarded as the last year of the current age which could be seen as "normal" within the customs and expectations of Western society.

As 2010 has progressed, events are beginning to demonstrate that a time of great unpredictability (transition) is upon us, with developments far beyond any scenarios hitherto envisaged by mainstream society, or indeed by most New Age participants. The time of gentle incremental change is over and the pace of evolutionary change is accelerating very markedly, in preparation of making a quantum leap, towards Fifth Dimensional Consciousness.

All aspects of consciousness (including humanity) are invited to connect with this new higher way forward. The great Spiritual Being of the Earth (Gaia if you like) has chosen to embrace the new and advance to much higher levels of awareness, something that will result in significant rearrangements to her outer surface to bring it into harmonious compatibility with her inner realms. Great stresses will build up under the Earth's crust as her plates begin to move significantly. Earth tremors have multiplied in intensity as well as frequency, with volcanoes erupting and sink holes appearing with alarming suddenness in multiple countries.

The most important realisation for each individual on Earth at this time is that the processes affecting our planetary home are also unfolding within ourselves. The molecular expression of all living forms is being altered; not a change in the molecular structure but rather the root forces which hold the molecules together so that the chemical composition although still the same in structure, has a different magnetic power, a new resonance.

The long-term history of the Earth has been one of continually evolving development of life and life-forms and there have been times within human history when there were long periods of stability, like the Golden Age of Atlantis which ran for some 50,000 years, but these were fairly unusual. Most of the time ongoing evolutionary change of high degree has been more normal. The present time might be recognised as being near the beginning of a 10 year period of intense change, which is necessary to bring about the birth of a new and higher consciousness civilisation on the Earth.

The dynamics of change mean that we will rediscover ourselves as multi-dimensional beings that are anchored in the physical plane yet are capable of crossing into other realms or dimensions. This development brings with it a new sense of community, one which is manifested in the ethereal realm that brings a higher consciousness based on love, compassion and service to others. Our human challenge is to anchor this consciousness in the physical plane.

At a practical and more earthly level, we must begin unshackle ourselves from the rigidity of the Piscean age, free up our thinking so that there are no limitations and pool our resources so that we might build a network of sustainable communities; self-sufficient in character and that incorporate as many creative and celebratory forms of activity as possible, in addition to basic life support.

The course of events now unfolding do not revolve around our existing personal desires or indeed personal needs, indeed our task is to adjust personal desires and needs to suit the rapidly changing conditions on Earth. It is not a case of imposing our will upon our environment, but of melding and working with it. The overriding priority will be to re-situate personal creation processes within the context in which you are actually living, rather than continue to hanker after contexts and conditions of the past. Provided some prior preparations have been made, it will be possible to maintain relative peace and harmony even during this coming period of major changes on the Earth's surface.

The key is to take the best elements of what has been in times past and bring them forward to the New World being created and by adopting a service-orientated role, individuals can come to terms with the need to attune to the Earth and attain real harmony within and without.

The West Kennet Long Barrow Ancestors Project.

Author Peter Knight is co-ordinating the most comprehensive survey ever of West Kennet Long Barrow.

The study will look at the excavations that have taken place, the history of research, earth energies, ley lines, shamanic traditions, psychic phenomena, orbs, acoustics and more.

Several on site visits have already taken place and Peter who is keen to learn about other people's experiences in relation to the site, is hoping to be able to present the findings of this work next spring.

Any input would be appreciated and if you would like to share information or would like to go on one of the site visits to help produce a ley lines map and survey the earth energies of this wonderful area, then contact Peter by telephoning 01249 823287. Email: stoneseecker@waitrose.com

The Right-Handed Universe: Why Antimatter Matters to You.

By Grahame Blackwell

'Seetee Shock', by Jack Williamson, is a sci-fi classic from the late '60s. ['Seetee' is a verbalisation of the abbreviation 'CT', for 'contraterrene' – another name for antimatter.] In this novel Williamson explores three of the fundamental issues surrounding antimatter: (1) it's extremely difficult to store and handle, because (2) on contact with conventional matter the two annihilate each other (3) giving off vast amounts of potentially lethal energy, both in terms of its ability to hurl any remaining matter around at very high speeds and in terms of the deadly high-frequency radiation emitted.

This story shows how the concept of antimatter captured the imagination (at least of those who followed such issues) from the early days of its discovery, following theoretical analysis by Paul Dirac in 1928 showed that antiparticles should exist – equivalent to electrons, protons etc but with opposite charges. The idea of asteroids, planets or even complete galaxies formed from antimatter is a compelling concept for a good sci-fi 'ripping yarn'.

In practice, though, that's not the case – at least in the observable universe. Any outcrops of antimatter would be quickly shown up by highly visible and identifiable emissions of energy as they came into contact with bodies or gas clouds of conventional matter. That hasn't happened – though isolated regions of antiparticle production have been observed in certain high-energy situations, notably near the centre of our galaxy. Production of antiparticles, always in tandem with conventional particles one-for-one, is now a well-established art in particle accelerators, and some of those antiparticles even find their way into practical use – notably in medical PET scan devices.

One of the big unanswered questions for science today is "Why is the universe formed pretty well exclusively of conventional matter, with no antimatter to speak of?" One obvious answer to this is that if there had been equal amounts of both, then in the 14 billion years or so since the Big Bang mutual annihilation would have wiped out all of both types and we wouldn't be here talking about it.

A slightly more helpful answer has been thrown up by careful investigation into what's referred to as 'CP symmetry breaking'. Put simply, it's been shown that particles and their antiparticles, at least in some cases, don't behave symmetrically. This gives a clue as to why there's more of one than the other. For some long time it's been proposed that at Big Bang time there were roughly equal amounts of both formed, with maybe just one in a billion or so more of our sort than the other sort – and what we have now is the remnant after tit-for-tat annihilation of all the antimatter and most of our sort.

It can easily be shown statistically that that 'slight' imbalance can't be down to chance. Proof of CP symmetry violation tends to confirm that it's not. So what is the reason for that asymmetry?

A serious contender for possible explanation of this imbalance is hidden within other research on the nature of material particles and their structure, dating from early last century right up to the present day. The logical conclusion is quite mind-blowing and could revolutionise our view of the universe and everything in it – including ourselves. All will be revealed in the WRG Totnes Branch presentation by Dr Grahame Blackwell on 22nd August. Don't miss it. For further information, telephone Jeffrey on 01803 868744.

Healing the Soul of the City. Creating an Underground Lake of Love. By Chris Street

A couple of weeks ago, I realised that London sits on a huge underground basin of water. It covers pretty much the whole of greater London.

Remembering Dr. Emoto's work with water and how well it responds to positive energy input, an idea occurred to me. The Earthstars geometry encoded into the landscape must be having a positive harmonising effect on that water, because it is the sort of sacred geometry that results from Dr. Emoto's work on water molecules. But maybe we should be giving it some help. What if we get as many people as possible to bless London's underground water and send healing, love and positive energy into it, on a daily basis? Pretty soon it would respond and start being a source of healing, uplifting energy in its own right, a huge lake of love, radiating joy and fulfilment up to the capital and everyone in it.

We can of course do the same with the water on the surface, the lakes and ponds in our parks, the streams, the fountains and the wells. Let's give it a go. Let's change the emotional climate of the capital and make it a better place to live, and an uplifting centre of healing and light.

To co-ordinate our efforts, focus the attention on it specifically at 12 noon, 6pm and 9pm. That doesn't mean you can't do it any other time. Every little helps as they say at Tesco. Namaste. For further information email Chris Street at starman144@hotmail.com or log on to www.earthstars.co.uk

Book Review: The Future of the Soul. By Ian Lawton

The attention of the entire universe is excitedly trained on our planet, indeed much has been written about 2012 and the global shift in consciousness. From catastrophic doom and gloom to sugar-coated messages that avoid the stark realities of what might lie ahead. But what if we were to be given channelled messages that are incredibly positive and exciting, yet also grounded? Well now we have.

These messages come from a diverse group of souls who refer to themselves as 'the council'. If you want to know why each and every one of us has a crucial role to play in this amazing transformation, this book is for you. Log on to www.rspress.org for further information.
