March 2011

March 2011 sees the opening of the Martinsey Isle Trust's (www.martinsey.org.uk) new drop in centre Safe Journey located in Sturminster Newton. The centre is dedicated to providing information about the subject of death and dying and will be opened by Dr Peter Fenwick, world authority on end of life phenomena and near-death experiences, on March 8th.

The latest addition to the on-line article archive is Samsara and the Christ Within by Dean Carter.

Ancient Britain: Lost Gods and Shambhala

By Nigel Blair

The lost gods of Britain are a mixture of several things. They may have been a dim and distant memory of Atlantean heroes, Britain was probably one of several Atlantean colonies at one time, it was a very sparsely populated area, a very mystical area if we are to believe one account, an area that was regarded as a place of the gods, rather in the manner of the Himalayas or the Gobi where the fabled Shambhala is supposed to be located.

Around 457 BC when the Buddha was dying he was visited by a wise man from the west whose name was Sucandra. They swapped some sacred teachings. It was originally thought that Sucandra came from the Middle East but it is now thought that he came from the west, either Greece or Britain.

The word Sucandra means "beautiful all white moon" a name that did exist in Welsh and that many ancient Britons were known by that name. The area around Glastonbury, Somerset up into South Wales was called "Gwyntha" which apparently meant "place of bliss" and the Lamas had apparently been told that Sucandra had arrived from the Place of Bliss in the west. What is more, Gwyn ap Nudd actually meant "beautiful all white moon". Thus in addition to ancient British teachers meeting and advising Pythagoras, a similar figure apparently went to visit the Buddha and exchanged sacred knowledge with him.

The Druids those great characters of ancient Britain may have been descendants of an even more ancient priestly caste who built Stonehenge and who may originally have come from the Gobi where there has been discovered evidence of mazes and shamanic initiations, very similar to ones that are supposed to have taken place in the west, also similar burial customs including burial in a foetal position, sometimes believed to represent a belief in reincarnation. Also discovered in Ireland an oath by which the ancient priests of Ireland swore that they would remain loyal to any agreements made with another tribe until the earth split open. An almost identical oath has been found in the Siberian regions.

We thus have a close connection between the practices of the ancient Celtic Britons and the Shambhala area. So maybe this confirms the story of Sucandra as having come from the Place of Bliss to the Shambhala area. Maybe there was more than one Shambhala, in fact the indications are that the most advanced teachers considered Shambhala to be a dimension rather than just one locality, it really is a spiritual dimension which you pass into. The ancient Celtic legends considered that when you passed on you went to the "Isles of the Blessed" beyond the western sunset. Some people think this is a reference to Atlantis, others think that it's a reference to a multi-dimensional Shambhala.

The worship would have been very closely connected to the idea of Mother Earth, there was a strong Goddess culture at the time, the Mother Goddess who's known in the east as Tara or in the west as Gaia, there were various names for her in the Celtic traditions, Diana the huntress, Rhiannon the horse goddess, Cerridwen who is connected to the cauldron of rebirth, Blodeuwedd the Flower Goddess, the Irish death goddess Morrigan and many others, all of whom are various aspects of the earth goddess. The Mother Goddess was the deity who protected the earth. There were male gods, Apollo for example also under a Celtic name which would have been either Bel or Llugh/Llud. Ancient Britain: Lost Gods and Shambhala continues on Page 4

Toward the Fifth Dynamic Now! By Craig Downer

I hail the great Fifth Dynamic, so referred to by Scientologist folk! 'T is woefully lacking amidst humanity today; and the living planet's now direly threatened because of this!

Consider then the several dynamics by which the individual identifies itself:

First, there is one's individual worldly attached Self: I, me, yours truly,

Second there is the enfleshed, affectionately regarded Family: parent, sibling, spouse, offspring, et cetera.

Third there arises the greater functional social Group one's consciously incarnate in, be it community or nation, i.e. culture with shared values worldly interned.

Fourth's identifying with one's whole incarnate kind, for us Humanity, Homo sapiens, a.k.a. specieism: that into which so many people today, in this or lesser dynamics are so exclusively, perversely self-absorbed, creating an imbalance that's become most horrid!

For the Fifth Dynamic takes us to higher, nobler plane, for its identification is with the Whole of Life: the plants, the animals, the decomposers, and other kingdoms, all of which indispensably, in freely inter-balanced fashion go together to make a world: an ecosystem brightly co-evolving!

... Many spirits all the same in essence, yet expressed in myriad evolved and evolving kinds, and all these wondrously interdependent, intertwined in patterns exquisitely defined in Time so that each ever learns and, in turn, teaches God's ever greater lessons! -- Please!

For each soul's challenge ever one of increasing wholeness and perfection is; and each step along the way is in a way duly opposite the former as well as the successor, throughout time, just as with left then with right foot we prance forth, according to all experienced events, all governed by Heavenly principles and laws that build and resolve us all, including all kinds and all worlds, through all greater dynamics unto that greatest which is: both in and consciously with God! -- Praise God! And Hallelujah! shout.

Of all the ancient myths, tales and traditions perhaps it is the Grail that symbolises the quest by all of us to find the true inner part of ourselves, rather like the symbolic meaning of the maze or labyrinth. The various trials and tribulations suffered by the knights are all part of the quest, culminating in the requirement to ask the right question at the Fisher King's Castle. There seem to have been two versions of the question, one is "What ails thee?" in other words the need to show compassion, the other question was "Whom does the Grail serve?", or in other words the need for service to the whole community rather than just the self.
