Myths and Ancient Aliens

By Marian Matthews

In my exploration of alien intervention in our reality, both ancient and modern, I came across the concept that many ancient myths and legends actually give clues to alien visits and historic intervention. Here are instances from three different civilisations.

Let us first consider the Dogon tribe and its connection with Sirius. The Dogon have been shown to have accurate ancient knowledge about that star system, within its myths and rituals that has just recently been validated by modern astronomy.

The Dogon are a remote tribe living in a region of Mali. They are thought to be of Egyptian descent and have astronomical legends in their culture which seem to date from before 3200 BC. In 1931 they were contacted by two French anthropologists who studied them for 30 years.

The anthropologists documented the tribe's traditional mythology and beliefs. This included a body of ancient lore regarding Sirius (the Dog Star). The Dogon knew that Sirius had a companion star that was invisible to the human eye called Po Tolo. They knew that Po Tolo moved in a 50 year orbit around Sirius, was small, incredibly heavy and that it rotated on its axis. They also cited the existence of a third star in the system, Emma Ya which has yet to be identified by astronomers.

The facts are that Sirius B does exist and it is a very heavy white dwarf, it does rotate on its own axis and it does have a 50 year ish elliptical orbit.

How could a primitive tribe know all this? Sirius was not seen though a telescope until 1862 and not photographed until 1970. Artefacts found describing the star system are at least 400 years old. The nature of Sirius B was not known until 1926.

The Dogon relate that this information was given to them by the Nommos, amphibious beings sent to Earth from Sirius for the benefit of Mankind. Other ancient cultures mention these fish Gods. The Babylonian people called them Annedoti. From them, apparently, was learnt the basic teachings of how to organize civilization. Representations of them are visible on the remaining stonework from that time.

Vedic and Sanskrit literature of India abounds with descriptions of flying machines, called Vimanas. Mythical Gods are said to have travelled everywhere and ruled using these Vimanas. Battles are said to have been fought in the skies using these machines. Some Vimanas are supposed to have resembled aircraft and fly with wings. Some were said to be not of this world, flew in a mysterious manner and were thought not to have been made by human beings. They is also said to be descriptions of inter-dimensional space craft. Some were said described as being "fast as thought itself".

No discussion of ancient aliens can leave out the ruins of the ancient city Puma Punku, 13,000 feet up in the Bolivian mountains. Initially thought to be 2000 years old, in some archaeological circles, now thought to be at least 12,000 years older than that. Local myths describe how it was created by sky gods in one day, and then destroyed it when they left. Inca myths have stories of a sky god Viracocha, with his giant servants, coming though the famous "gateway of the sun" on this site. They are supposed to have created mankind and then destroyed it with a great flood (sounds familiar!). Could these Gods have been ancient aliens?

The fragments of the city that do remain are themselves a mystery, which give us some clues. They include precision-cut granite stones, including some weighing over 10-tons, which are laid accurately in place to tolerances almost impossible to achieve today. There is no worldly reasonable explanation of how this was done considering the primitive culture, limited tools and absence of trees to assist with construction and roller-delivery systems. Machine tools or other advanced technology would have had to be involved.

So, this construction would involve either ancient technology that we have lost, or alien technology out of this world. Myths say that the big blocks were just floated into place (as allegedly in ancient Egypt or even Stonehenge). Could this have been done using antigravity technology. This involves balancing the force of gravity with some other force, such as electromagnetism, or using sound waves (acoustic levitation) to do the same thing? It could not have been done by primitive man. I have given three examples and there are many other similar stories from other cultures involving alien intervention. They seem to have been with us right from the beginning.
