VOLUME 16, ISSUE 11

November 2021

November 2021 begins with All Hallows Day or “Alholowmesse” the middle English meaning of All Saints' Day.

The residents of Santiago Sacatepéquez in Guatemala celebrate All Saints Day on 1st November with a kite festival. Hundreds of spectacular giant kites with colourful designs are made by locals and flown over the cemetery on this day.

Balancing the Yin and Yang within Us

By Joan Grainger

In this time of change we are invited to look at the universe and ourselves anew, accepting into our consciousness the awareness that the Yin, (esoteric) and Yang, (exoteric) within us, must fuse if we are to operate at a deeper/ higher level of consciousness. By binding together gentleness (Yin), and fearlessness (Yang), we can lift ourselves up in thought, to a region beyond the two, where we can BE.

When thus lifted beyond this fused polarity we stand in awed expectation of a new drama unfolding before us. We experience discriminating awareness and stand as cosmic warriors, as new world servers ready to go, Arthurian style in to the open arena of tumult and confusion, to soothe the destructive energies of anger, resentment and fear by our calming presence.

This fearlessness goes beyond mere bravado and manifests itself through poise and richness in our lives; while gentleness, instead of being passivity or non-violence becomes the experience of the sacred. We can fully understand the Buddha who said One's own self conquered is better than all the people conquered; not even a god could change into defeat the victory of a man who has vanquished himself.

The victorious ones are the meek, heirs to the Earth. In this context the word “meek” means and absence of resentment, whose energies on higher inner planes have been replaced by Love and Wisdom. With such a conduct of being we rise above all things evil. If plagued by adversity or ensnaring or deflecting energies, we calmly remove ourselves from such a situation and with love in our hearts - directed to the soul level, carry on with our work as befits our mission in life.

Those who transcend the lower vibrational energies through love stand on the verge of ‘apostlehood’, as pioneers of the Aquarian age they transform and act as transforming agents. As Jesus said “The work I do, you shall also do, and greater works than these you shall do”.

While linked to the God-Head as free and unencumbered beings with our feet firmly planted on the ground, we cautiously and resolutely approach the golden bridge that spans two epochs. Without looking back and ignoring the frivolous taunts and distractions of those that would seek to lower our energetic vibration, because they have chosen not to cross such a bridge, but who need to hold others in their hypnotic spell lest they lose their power to dominate and manipulate, we boldly step forward beyond their vista and into a new age.

At this point second thoughts are obviated, and any lingering doubts banished, for we have the confidence in the purity of our perception. With an unwavering mind and an unhesitating attitude we embrace the greater force which is beyond reason, beyond intellectual dialogue and enter over this life saving bridge and see from afar glimmering in the great light on the shores of our higher being, the inner world of spirit, where lies mystical knowledge and the realisation that there is no death, but life eternal, while we remain constantly living in the now and deal with the practical in the hustle and bustle of daily life.

Book Review. A New Dimension to Ancient Measures

By Dr Thomas Gough and Peter Harris

The initial purpose of the research for this book was to establish that a unit of length, the Harris and Stockdale Megalithic Foot, (HSMF), of 1.1785 feet, was known and used in prehistoric Britain.

In this new specific study, professionally designed computer programmes and statistical assessment of the dimensions of stone circles together with other megalithic remains were used to test for use of the HSMF. These revealed much about these megalithic structures and the abilities of the builders who were using this very ancient unit of measurement, probably originating in Mesopotamia more than 6,000 years ago.

As the analyses of stone ring dimensions using the HSMF are examined, the authors' unavoidable conclusions are that the knowledge and expertise in prehistory was far in advance of what has been considered possible. Knowledge of the celestial values built into stone rings was not necessarily determined in Britain but had possibly been known for a long time. The fact that employment by the megalithic designers of the remains had used the HSMF in the architecture to unify geometry, important time values and astronomy, poses serious questions to our current commonly held views about prehistoric peoples and their capabilities.

The book certainly asks the reader to reflect on the commonly held view of the megalithic people's supposed limited knowledge and capabilities and poses some serious questions that challenge our view of history and the recent evolution of mankind. The book is published by Moravian Press, Elgin, 2021.

It can be bought directly from the authors Dr Thomas Gough and Peter Harris at: hsmf14.142@gmail.com or through the Megalithic Portal bookshop megalithic.co.uk for £15 plus £2.50 p and p.
